FEBRUARY SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Socks. Cat Of Principle.

How Bill Clinton Dodged One Last Bullet Before Leaving The Presidency

By Dan Rattiner

What does Socks know and when did she know it? That is the burning question that Americans will be asking in the next few weeks.

If my analysis is correct, however, the answer will never be known. A shame of the former Clinton Administration successfully covered up.

Consider yourself fortunate to be reading an account of this written now by an experienced investigative journalist such as myself. I smell a rat. Or, in this case, a cat.

My ears perked up two weeks ago when I read that Socks the cat would be given away to one of Mr. Clinton's aides who likes her very much. There was a photograph of the aide, Mrs. Betty Curry, holding Socks over her shoulder like a baby. There was a big smile on her face.

Clinton's Press Secretary Jake Stewart joked that there had been many attempts to bring Socks, who has been with the family for six years, together with the other official Presidential pet, Buddy the dog, but that all attempts had failed. Buddy would come shambling into a room. Socks would arch her back and hiss. Buddy would go shambling back out of the room.

The answer is–and every investigative reporter instinct tells me this–Socks knows something she is not supposed to know.

"The president is working very hard to reconcile the two pets," Stewart said during the last week of the Clinton Presidency. "Although time is running out, he is going to give it his best effort during his remaining weeks in office." And if that failed, Socks would have to go.

Reporters acknowledged that they themselves had witnessed this behavior for quite some time. There were photographs of Socks, arching her back at Buddy, going back a year.

Question: If this unacceptable behavior has been going on for such a very long time, why have they waited until now to get rid of Socks?

More questions: The Clintons have a big mansion in Chappaqua. And they have another big mansion in Georgetown. Bill just got a $6 million retirement package. Hillary just got an $8 million book contract. Surely they have a staff at each of these houses. Why not Socks at one house, Buddy at the other?

Still another question: Why does Socks have

Our favorite hide-a-way friend and author Leon Uris will be able to tune in on CBS mini-series Haven. Haven is a book written by Ruth Gruber that recounted the story of incredible personal strength and courage. The book is based on the journey of bringing home 1,000 World War II refugees to America on a U.S. Military transport ship. The year...1944 and she was only thirty-two years old. Leon freely acknowledges how much Exodus had been influenced by Gruber. Our society has been blessed to have two caring humanitarians record those times.

How To Meet People You Never Met Before And Make Dinner At Midnight

By Dan Rattiner

(September 4) Darryl Strawberry, the former Yankee, was arrested today in Tampa, Florida, and charged with acting incoherently and driving a car erratically. No drugs were found and he passed a sobriety test. Strawberry said he was under the influence of prescription drugs.

This story is a testimonial about a little white pill called Ambian. Cathie was having trouble sleeping the other night; her doctor prescribed it for her. You know those pages of warnings that come with the prescription bottle? Usually, you just throw them away. With Ambian, I suggest you read them. "May cause bizarre mental behavior," is one of the possible side effects.

Cathie had apparently taken one of these pills on a Wednesday night when I was in New York City. The teenagers told me the next day that about 11:30 at night, two hours after she had gone to bed, she woke up and rousted some of them into the kitchen and made them a midnight snack, something they gladly ate, since as anyone knows, at least anyone who has a male teenager knows, people that age will eat almost anything, anytime. What was more bizarre, beside the fact that one of the teenagers told me that Cathie seemed to slur her words or otherwise seemed impaired while making the dinner, was the fact that the next morning the boys got balled out by her for making such a big mess in the kitchen. She had no recollection of having made them a meal.

You know those pages of warnings that come with the prescription bottle? With Ambian, I suggest you read them. "May cause bizarre mental behavior..."

In any case, Wednesday night was two nights before we had invited over some long time friends, John and Maria, to have dinner with us. Maria said that Cathie had called her that night to confirm that they were coming over and there was nothing odd about the call except that it was rather late, around midnight. Cathie told me that she had no recollection of calling Maria either, and said it must have been the sleeping pill she had taken, Ambian. I told her she had better not take it any more.

We expected John and Maria at seven o'clock on Friday. It was a bitter cold night, about ten degrees out, and by the light of the moon we could see that Three Mile Harbor directly, across the street from our house, had frozen over. But Cathie had gone out of her way to make a fabulous dinner, there were logs crackling in the fireplace, Miles Davis on the stereo, candles and champagne and platters of cheese set out, the table set for four in our finest china.

The front door bell rang and with Cathie in the kitchen I went to answer it. I opened the door and there were two dinner guests all dressed up carrying a bottle of wine and a box of cookies. I had never seen them before in my life.

"Hello Dan," the man shouted warmly.

"How are you?" I said, inviting them in.

The couple came inside and the man introduced his wife Nancy, whose hand I shook.

"Let me take your coats and scarves," I said. They were taking them off when Cathie appeared from the kitchen to welcome them.

"How are you Nancy?" she said, embracing her. "What a nice bottle of wine. Here, I'll go in the kitchen and open it."

As she turned, she stared at me, first with an expression of contentment and then, seeing that I was as innocent as she was, with an expression of wonder. She mouthed the words; "I have no idea." And then she turned and went back to the kitchen.

At this point our friends, Maria and John who we were expecting, appeared at the door and I was introducing everybody to everybody all the way around and carrying coats into the den to throw on the sofa. But, I really wanted to get into the kitchen, something I was able to do, as John and Maria engaged in conversation with the mystery couple.

Cathie was stirring the sauce, her grandmother's recipe. "I met them at the horse show last summer," she said. "That's all I know." She put down the spoon, and with me trailing behind her headed back into the living room. We passed the dining room table with its four place settings.

"Dan is gonna give you all a tour of the rest of the house," she said loudly.

"Yes I am," I said. "Come on this way everybody." And I led them away, past the study and up the steps to the master bedroom suite and our office studio. As I expected, when we got back, the table was set for six.

The dinner lasted for three hours and was a glorious success. The mystery guests told us they lived near Port Washington and it had taken them almost two hours though the ice and snow to get to our house. John talked about the house he has upstate and a problem he has with muskrats and raccoons. There was homemade pasta, at least three different kinds of desserts and coffee. And afterward, we sat around the fireplace discussing among other things, fireplaces and the different kinds you can buy up state, Franklin Stoves, Vermont Castings and so forth, until finally it was midnight and Danny and Nancy said we better all wind it up because they had a long drive home. Everyone left at the same time and the last thing that Cathie said to Danny as she gave him an air kiss on the cheek was "Thank you so much for coming." Which I couldn't help but think absolutely true.

The door closed, everyone was gone. "We pulled it off," Cathie said.

"Yes, we did," I said. "And obviously, you invited them."

"It must have been that Wednesday night," she said. "I called Maria and I don't remember that, so maybe I called them too."

"Or," I said, "maybe they called you and you just invited them over."

It seemed to me hard to believe that a little white pill called Ambian could have caused all this. And so being the man of the house, when we went to bed, though I had forbidden Cathie from ever taking another one, I took one. At three o'clock in the morning Cathie found me face down, at the bottom of the stairs leading up to the bedrooms, moaning incoherently something about the Green Bay Packers and the Miami Dolphins.

Ambian. Remember the name. You've been warned. •

Darkest Manhattan

Visit NYC – Land Of Earthquakes, Explosions, Floods, Snowstorms And Falling Buildings

By Dan Rattiner

Once a week, on a Wednesday, I park my car down at the Hampton Jitney stop in Bridgehampton and take the two hour bus ride to Manhattan. I have business there. I stay overnight. I come back the next day. So far, so good.

Last Wednesday morning, an earthquake hit Manhattan, measuring 2.6 on the Richter Scale. Its epicenter was reported at 72nd Street and Third Avenue. There is a fault line cutting across Manhattan — I never knew this — running northwest to southeast from 125th Street in Harlem down into Long Island City in Queens. It is believed this quake, which was reported by more people in Queens than anywhere else, might have been part of a shifting of the 125th Street fault. Mostly the reports involved windows rattling and things shifting on shelves. There was no damage. This time.

The week before on a Wednesday, just before noon, a huge underground explosion near Lexington Avenue and 60th Street blew a manhole cover seventy feet into the air. It sounded like a cannon. Nobody was hurt when it went up, and nobody was hurt when it came down. It landed between some parked cars. But for fear there might be further explosions, several buildings were evacuated, most notably 770 Lexington Avenue and 127 and 129 East 60th Street. A half an hour later, the power went out in the area for the better part of an hour.

And I remember an entire block... being roped off when an underground water main blew...putting the whole street underwater

It turned out that the power outage was caused by the Con Ed people who had gone under the street to see what had caused the explosion. What they found was that the rock salt the Sanitation Department had put down to melt the snow from the big storm we had the week before — all together they had spread 127,000 tons of rock salt around the City — this rock salt had done its job and all the melted snow with the dissolved rock salt had gone down the sewers and storm drains into the city's electrical system, where the rock salt shorted the wires, causing them to sputter and smoke, ultimately building up pressure until the manhole cover just let go. The Con Ed people had to cut good wires to deal with the bad wires. And it was in cutting the good wires they temporarily caused a power outage.

According to Con Ed there have been more than 400 rock salt damaged wire incidents in the city since the first of the year, leaving as many as 1,500 people without power for up to twenty-four hours. But this is the price you pay for cleaning the snow off the streets.

I remember on one of my Wednesday forays into the city seeing where a sinkhole had opened up on East 14th Street and swallowed a car. This was two years ago. Maybe you remember it. The police had the place roped off with yellow crime tape.

And I remember an entire block on East 23rd Street being roped off when an underground water main blew, causing a huge geyser and putting the whole street underwater. It stayed underwater for a day and a half.

Of course we all have to deal with pieces of old buildings — usually high up cornices — breaking off and smashing to the ground. You read about it happening about once a week. And then of course, once in a while an old building just plain falls down.

They have been having trouble with some of the newer buildings in Manhattan as well. There was that whole mess of bricks that came loose and tumbled to the ground from the side of the 24th floor of that building on Lexington Avenue a few years ago. The sidewalk there was roped off for months. And then there was that scaffolding collapse on the side of a building under construction in Times Square. Some of it crashed through a window of a hotel across the street. It killed a woman.

Cathie and I were down in Orlando a few weeks ago — Orlando is much safer than New York — and at the Universal Studios Theme Park, we went on the King Kong ride. It reminded me of just how dangerous New York really is. You get on a replica of the Roosevelt Island Tramway — you remember how much trouble they had with the real tramway some years ago with the wires getting jammed and, one time, actually breaking, leaving a cable car dangling — and you head out over the East River replica and there is a King Kong replica, hanging onto the 59th Street Bridge replica, roaring and showing his fangs as you head toward him. We got away– you always do on this ride–but not before getting a full whiff of King Kong's banana breath.

Last I heard, King Kong was still up on top of one of the twin towers of the World Trade Center. Not the one the terrorists tried to blow up with sticks of dynamite eight years ago. The other one.

I think that was on a Wednesday, too. Wednesday might not be a good day to go to the city. I'm thinking about changing it.

Anybody remember the year there was that fad where you gave a loved one a pet baby alligator for Christmas? They'd start to grow. People didn't know what to do with them. They'd flush them down the toilet. Six months later we had a big, big problem in the city sewer system. We had to send sharpshooters down there with hunting rifles.

Anybody remember the time somebody flew a small plane into the side of the Empire State Building hitting the 84th floor? I think that was on a Wednesday.

I'm definitely going to think about changing my day. •

The Army Of One

New TV Commercial For The Army Is Out And Joining Up Is For "Me"

By Dan Rattiner

Did you see the new TV commercial for the U. S. Army? No it is not a variation on the theme "Be All That You Can Be." That's history. The commercial shows a lone soldier, at dawn, running through the Mojave Desert, a thirty-five pound pack on his back, mumbling to himself. At one point a squad of soldiers, going in the other direction, jogs past. At another point, a Blackhawk helicopter rattles by overhead. The soldier just keeps on running.

"Even though there are one million forty five thousand six hundred and ninety soldiers just like me," he mumbles breathlessly, "I am my own force. With technology, with training, with support, who I am has become better than who I was. And I'll be the first to tell you, the might of the U. S. Army doesn't lie in numbers. It lies in me. I am an Army of one."

And that's the commercial.

The reason for this rather dramatic new change to an entirely new commercial — the Be All That You Can Be commercial is now twenty-two years old — is that for two out of the last three years, the number of people joining up has not come up to the required quota. Blame it on the advertising.

The Army has fired Young & Rubicon, who created Be All That You Can Be, and they hired Leo Burnett Advertising, giving them $150 million in commercial money and telling them they could use it all up in one year and if what they did worked there'd be more money for them for the following year.

The trouble with this... is that the Army is not a gym. You're not supposed to think in the Army.

This is what they've come up with. We get to listen in on a soldier's most intimate thoughts. And what he is thinking is that the Army is like belonging to a gym. Build yourself up. Be strong. Nobody can touch you. You're king of the world. A one-man Army.

The trouble with this — and the Army and Leo Burnett working hand in hand have done a ton of market research to arrive at this — is that the Army is not like a gym. You are not supposed to think in the Army. Just ask anybody who's been there. You're supposed to keep your mind blank, get out there and do exactly as you're told, and if necessary get shot at. Yes, the enemy is going to be out there too and they are going to be shooting at you. We call it Defending the American Way of Life.

One of the more colorful characters here in the Hamptons, the late writer Joe Heller, years ago wrote the book Catch 22 based on this remarkable discovery. I have no idea what he thought when he joined the army back then to help out in World War II. But in southern Italy, when his unit went out on bombing missions — he was a bombardier — the enemy started shooting at him and it scared the hell out of him. Back at the base, he went to see the psychiatrist who he was told could give him a free pass home if he had mental problems, but when he told the psychiatrist his mental problem was that he was terrified the enemy was trying to kill him, the psychiatrist told him his reaction was perfectly normal because they WERE trying to kill him and so he couldn't be given a pass. Which was Catch 22. This book, after that, went on to be the fifth best selling book ever. Number one is the Bible.

As for the new commercial, Secretary of the Army Louis Caldera said that the Army wasn't going to be changing, only the commercial about the Army would be changing. Young people from a more varied part of life would be responding to this commercial, their marketing studies told them. But once in, there'd be the same values of duty, honor, service and country as there always was.

"But you've got to get them in the door," he said.

It's just that, in recent years, young people have gotten more interested in immediate gratification and what's in it for them. You go to the gym, work out, step back out into the street all buffed and shined up and you're ready for action. Whatever.

And there is another great TV commercial on its way out. The Maytag commercial. The one starring the Maytag Repairman. You remember him. He would be sitting around in the repair shop with nothing to do because Maytags were so well built there was nothing to repair. They were paying him to do nothing.

Leo Burnett, who created this character in 1967, was told by the client that the Maytag Repairman just wasn't hacking it anymore. Times were changing. People thought he ought to go out and do something if he didn't have any Maytags to repair. And so, Leo Burnett consulted with the creative consulting firm known as Will Vinton Studios, best known for their introduction of the California Raisinettes and the talking M & M Candies. It was decided to keep the Maytag Repairman, but change his attitude. Get him out doing something constructive. The result is hitting your TV screen beginning January 28.

David Altschul, who is President of Vinton, said that the "new" Maytag Repairman would be out of the shop and out into the world to make himself "as perfect as Maytag."

"He's going on a quest," Altschul said. "He's going to relentlessly pursue, for himself, the kind of perfection he sees in the Maytag line of appliances."

In other words, the Maytag Repairman Man, in one episode, might just go to the gym to work out alongside the U. S. Army soldier.

I have no problem with the Maytag Repairman Man finding ways to make himself a better person while waiting for the dryers to break down. Good for him.

I do have a problem with young people joining the army, thinking it's all about making themselves better people only to find a drill sergeant who tells them to shut up, get down in the mud, give him a hundred, and, after that, go out and trade shots with that sniper. Under these circumstances, all these American soldiers will feel they have been induced to sign up under false pretenses, and there you'll find them, lined up to see the psychiatrist.

Whole countries will fall to dictatorships while that is going on. • Teenage Romance.

Isn't it time to Break-up?

Let's face it...a lot of us started smoking when we were teenagers. For us, we thought cigarettes captured "romance." Maybe it was Bogie in Casablanca...or John Wayne fighting America's fight...or was it that cowboy riding through Marlboro country? As a babyboomer and former smoker, I understand.

I'm Judith Rose, I'm a Registered Nurse, Psychotherapist and Hypnotherapist, and I have many skills that can help you break "your teenage romance." If you aren't satisfied with my program – you'll like my money back guarantee. So, why not call today? After all, Bogie would want you to.

Plum Island Does Not Have the Funds For Upgrade

Contrary to news making the rounds that there are sufficent monies in the U.S. Department of Agriculture budget to upgrade the Plum Island research facililty from Biosafety Level 3 to Level 4 (to handle disease that would be contagious to humans), and thus bypass Congressional approval, USDA spokeswoman Sandy Hays said this is not the case. A Biosafety Level 4 facility would cost at least $150 million to build – if it were attached to a Biosafety Level 3 building already in place. To start a Level 4 from scratch would cost $250 million. "We just don't have that kind of money," said Ms. Hays.

Court Rules Against Church Obtaining Abortion Statistics

The New York State Supreme Court has ruled against the Southampton Full Gospel Church in its bid to get statistics concerning local abortions from Southampton Town.

The Village does keep a tally of fetal deaths, as state health law mandates, but they do not place the deaths in categories, specifically as death by abortion (which would occur in Soughtampton Hospital) or from natural causes. So, the court ruled that the village could not be compelled to supply figures it does not keep.

The church, led by Rev. Donald M. Havrilla, has sought abortion statistics from the town for the past two years. It claimed the town was violating the Freedom of Information Act by not supplying the tallies.

The village has told the church that specific figures for abortion could only be gotten through the State Department of Health. Southampton Hospital officials have all along refused to release data on abortions on the grounds of violating patient confidentiality.

When Gorgeous Open Space In The Hamptons Is So Expensive They Fence It Off

By Susan Simm

There was a time when the "summer" people were summer people and when summer was over, they left. For New York. For Palm Beach. For somewhere else.

During the winter, local kids would go "tubing" –riding inflated tire tubes tied behind pickups in the snow–through the streets of the "private" Georgica Association in Wainscott. In the fall, Fisherman would drive their trucks on the beach, unfurling their haul seines or they would head over to Georgica Pond in East Hampton to catch bait fish. In Bridgehampton and Sagaponack, hunters would stalk pheasant through cornfields, often right onto someone's property (who wasn't there, because it wasn't summer). All of these things happened "off-season." That is, not during the summer. And nobody complained. At least not very loudly.

This was all before the "New Global Economy."

We all know the story. During the great bull market of the 80s, people accumulated unprecedented wealth. Open land, despite stratospheric prices, became and is still becoming more and more scarce. Fields that used to be farms are turning into housing developments.

As open space disappears and more people are crowded closer together, our rural character is being overwhelmed by a sense of segregation. Fences designed to keep people out now enclose once-open fields and guards, driving black Jeep Cherokees, are posted on the grounds of large estates, which for many years had been "protected" by pairs of simple, white wooden gates. The message is clear: KEEP OUT.

As a result of the population expansion, both year-round and seasonal, land preservation has become a high priority on everyone's list. In April of 1999, the 2% real estate transfer tax went into effect in all five East End towns. This tax was created to finance a Community Preservation Fund to purchase land and development rights on private land and was approved by popular vote.

Between April of 1999 and October of 2000, this tax generated over $31 million for the Fund. As of this writing, about $19 million has been spent acquiring land and development rights on 27 parcels to preserve a total of 366 acres. Currently in contract are deals on another 13 parcels totaling another 231 acres for a grand total of nearly 600. These parcels are "target areas" designated by the Towns as "significant."

Are the Hamptons becoming one big gated community? It's enough to make one long for a simpler time...

As reported in an article entitled "The Port of Missing Men" (January 19 issue), Louis Bacon gifted the Peconic Land Trust with a conservation easement on a 540-acre piece of property known as Cow Neck Farm. According to Mr. Bacon's attorney, Kevin Law, Mr. Bacon paid "in the neighborhood" of $25 million for the property in 1998. At the time of this transaction, the Town did not have the funds available to purchase the property. Even if it had the funds now to purcahse Cow Neck, it would do so at the expense of saving many other targeted areas. While the preservation of the Robins Island and Cow Neck Farm properties through conservation easements is a wonderful thing, this does not create or allow public access to them.

As Randall Weichbrodt, program manager of the Community Preservation Fund said, "even though this amount [$31 million] seems like a lot of money, there just never seems to be enough available fast enough due to escalating land values." The gift of the conservation easement on Cow Neck Farm is viewed by Southampton Town Supervisor Cannusio and others as being beneficial to the community, which it is as it substantially limits development of the property, but the community does not gain access and so the estate remains private property as it has been since its creation in 1928. The easement being held by the Trust allows limited development, a maximum of 5 house lots of 9 acres apiece. The surrounding land, in the event that these lots are ever developed, remains protected "in perpetuity by the easement gifted to the Trust," according to Marsha Kenny, but public access is still denied.

Many people have, despite this fact, been on the property known as Cow Neck Farm (yes, I am among the fortunate). Its natural beauty is legendary, being almost completely unspoiled by any development. There are fresh water streams and views across Great Peconic Bay from high atop cliffs that plunge straight down to the sea. Maybe its just nostalgia, or a penchant for romanticizing the past, but when Peter Salm owned the property (until 1998 when his heirs sold it to Louis Bacon), there seemed to be less concern over keeping people out. The property, surrounded now by snow fence where public access could easily be gained, lends the distinct impression that this is PRIVATE and THIS MEANS YOU! The sign at the gate, off of North Sea Road, reinforces the subliminal message with a resounding KEEP OUT.

If a "conservation easement" does not confer public access, then what is it exactly? The confusion starts with the term "easement," a term frequently used in real estate deals to describe a "right of passage" [Random House]. For example, if you purchase a house that does not have road frontage, an "easement" may be granted on a neighbor's property so that you can have a driveway to your house. You do not own the property underneath that driveway, the neighbor continues to own it, but he cannot use your driveway if an "easement," or right of passage, has been granted to you. This is a legally binding agreement.

A "conservation easement," as might be misconstrued due to the real estate usage of the term "easement," has nothing to do with granting public access. It is designed, according to the Ohio State University Fact Sheet on Community Development, "to exclude certain activities on private land, such as residential subdivisions. Its primary purpose is to conserve natural resources on the land and runs with the property deed." Tax benefits, "if an easement is granted in perpetuity, are often cited as a major factor in easement donations as federal and estate tax savings may be substantial." This is the case with both of Bacon's conservation easement donations, on Robins Island as well as on Cow Neck, the first being given to The Nature Conservancy and the second to the Peconic Land Trust.

Another confusing issue is the concept of "development rights." If development rights are sold, or transferred, on a piece of property, where do they go? According to Randall Weichbrodt, "if Southampton Town purchases development rights, as in the case of farmland, then those rights are permanently removed from the property, even if it is sold." There is no public access gained as a result of the transfer of these rights; the property remains privately owned.

While the picture may seem bleak for public access to preserved land, there is some good news. "The Town of Southampton is currently working on a stewardship program for all aquired properties to determine what public access will be granted and in what form," said Weichbrodt. The Nature Conservancy, a not-for-profit private organization, owns and manages approximately 30 properties throughout the South Fork, most of which are open to the public and about which few people are aware. One of these properties is at the end of Captain's Neck Lane in the estate section of Southampton. It was donated to the Conservancy by Henry Dupont and his wife Ruth Wales Dupont in 1961 and is a beautiful place to walk along a trail that goes all the way out to Shinnecock Bay, one of the most productive shell- and finfish bays on Long Island. Another property owned by the Conservancy is right in the middle of Georgica in East Hampton: Fulling Mill Farm. This 17-acre property has been preserved right there among the grand houses. Since this parcel is in the middle of a residential area, the Conservancy would like to be notified if you would like to walk here but they will grant access upon request.

The influx of new wealth and its attendant service businesses has created a pressing need for preservation of our area's natural beauty that is being filled by organizations such as the Peconic Land Trust and The Nature Conservancy. But along with this wealth has come an arrogance, that 80s "Master of the Universe" mentality, that compels people to come rushing out of their waterfront homes and tell fishermen that they cannot fish in front of their houses, even though this is public property. Or that they are not welcomed on Georgica Pond, a place where they have fished for generations, because the owners of the property surrounding the pond have paid so much money for their homes that they are entitled to some privacy.

Are the Hamptons becoming one big gated community? It's enough to make one long for a simpler time when there seemed to be enough room for everyone, no matter the size of his fortune. •

The Sheltered Islander By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF AN ISLANDER # 139 BUSH WHACKED

I can't believe we're starting a new millenium with a president elected by a questionable 184 votes. He doesn't have the mandate of an American mouse let alone the American people. I wonder how it feels to know you're probably president only because you blocked a recount. Sort of like knowing you won because the other team's bus broke down. You'll never know if you really won on merit. But hey, Texans don't need due process, they jes' need ta win by God!

So now we have George Wuss Bush. His daddy got us into a war to protect our oil the second year he was in office. It was the first time this country made the first strike. I loved when he said we had to protect our Kuwatii friends... we don't have any Kuwatii friends, we need Kuwatii oil and that was the only reason American boys were made to die in the sand. There was no moral imperative to be there. I'm betting George Wuss Bush will have a war during his administration too. He'll have to improve on daddy's record, so maybe we'll get into a fight sooner, or even better, have a higher body count than daddy's piddly little Gulf War.

The good news is we get to see Barbara Bush and her pearls again. I adore her, I would have voted for her. She's a Pro-Choice Republican at least. We get to see Colin Powell again too. I wish he had run, I'd have voted for him. Too bad John McCain couldn't have hung in there. At least he was a legitimate war hero and worthy of some respect. I really considered voting for him while he ran. He had some very intelligent ideas. The character of a person counts a long way with me. Character is something the new administration never had to worry about. They're 'Good ole boys'. But I'm not really worried, geez, it's not like we elected the Governor of a state where rednecks still drag African people to their deaths behind pick-ups...oops....

I was worried that the Bush/Dick ticket wouldn't take care of the environment. What a relief to hear George Wuss Bush say that we can continue strip mining because we have better ways of mending the land now. And drilling for more oil is no problem since we have better methods of controlling contamination. Whew! For the minute there I thought he was going to encourage further development of alternative energy sources and deprive his cronies of the extra millions they need. You just can't have enough power and money if you're an oilman.

Slutika Lewinsky is the reason Gore lost the election. That the economy is in the best shape since WWII, with the lowest inflation and unemployment isn't really as important as that fun scandal and costly impreachment we had. Now Slutika successfully sells a line of handbags. I guess she knew selling dresses would have been 'over the top', or would 'all over the top' be more applicable? Linda Rat Trapp is trying to revamp her image into that of a humble servant of the people. She'll get mileage out of her role for the rest of her life. What's wrong with this picture?

One of my brothers had the courage to vote his conscience and voted for Nader. Another brother voted for Buchanan, but only because Hitler couldn't run. Another wasn't aware there was an election. Most of my family voted for Bush because they always vote Republican. Why? Because their parents voted Republican. Figure that one out.

I would have voted for Nader, but his running mate, I can't even recall her name now, was an old flower child who completely embarassed herself. I watched her acceptance speech, which was lucid but very fringe. She obviously hasn't bought anything new since 1968. Long stringy grey hair, a man's shirt with a vest and beads and long dangling earrings, no make-up. She needed a make-over more than any woman I have ever seen. She needed to be saved from herself before she could save the country. She committed every conceivable "fashion-don't" all at the same time and on National TV. She was still at Woodstock. I know it's wrong to judge someone by their looks, but whenever I'm running for a national office, like Vice President of the United States(!), I shave my legs and do my hair nice. Call me old-fashioned. Nader would have pulled even more votes from Gore if it weren't for her.

The Libertarians are fascinating and frightening. Legalizing all drugs to end the costly and failing

TEN YEARS AGO

"It's Tough to Be a Judge"

January 11, 1991

If you want to get a feel for what living in the country is really like, go down to a local justice court, sit on one of the benches in the back and watch the proceedings. Justice is indeed meted out here, though it sometimes does not happen the way you might think.

I have been in court when a justice, instead of proclaiming an offender innocent or guilty, told the police, instead, to escort the gentleman to the Town Line and tell him never to come back. I've been in court when a justice told two litigants that he didn't want to hear about it, that he wanted them to go out in the hall and straighten it out themselves and it wasn't worth his time. And it was just a couple of weeks ago, in an East Hampton court, that a judge told a defendant if he insisted on continuing to try to plead guilty he could get twenty years, this was the wrong time to do that and the proper plea at this time was not guilty.

People have to have a lot of guts to be a justice of the peace. It's a tough job. They are both judges and juries. But at the same time they know that what goes on in their courtrooms are matters known by everybody in town. If they do a bad job they will hear about it on Main Street. Further, they will probably get bumped out of office at the next election, which is never more than two years away. Or they could get in worse trouble. People can file a complaint to the judicial system against a justice of the peace.

It is in this context, with our local Justices trying mightily to do the right thing — some of them aren't even trained attorneys — and most of our citizenry knowing that these local justices are trying mightily to do the right thing and don't always get it exactly right but they get it pretty close, that there is the matter of the Southampton parking ticket.

Vacationer parks at Fowler's Beach at 3 p.m. Sunbathes till 5. (This was in late August.) Returns to find he has a parking ticket. Thinks he shouldn't have gotten one. Goes to court. Loses.

Next week, at a cost far greater than the amount of the fine to both the vacationer and the court system, this matter is being taken up in the New York State Court of Appeals in Brooklyn. Issue at stake is whether or not the earlier decision, taken in Southampton Justice Court, ought to be overturned.

The man is Richard Kulek, he lives in Wantagh and has been vacationing in the Hamptons for many years. At his court appearance here in Southampton, he went in with Polaroid pictures of the parking lot and his car, of the street signs, of the sand dunes and the snow fence. He also brought a notarized affidavit, signed by a friend attesting to where Mr Kulek parked.

I don't know how Mr. Kulek presented himself in court, but afterwards, he told reporters that because of the way the arrows were pointing on the sign, it was just a money maker for the local citizenry at the expense of innocent motorists. He said he wanted justice. He said the Judge would not let him introduce the affidavit since the person who wrote it was not present. And he said that he refused to pay his fine afterwards, only relenting some days later and sending it in by mail. Now he was appealing and he'd take it as far as he had to in order to prove his innocence, even if the cost of doing so was ten times the cost of the fine.

It reminds me of two wonderful cases that took place before a justice of the peace not long ago.

First case was a man accused of not stopping at a stop sign. He got up in front of the Justice, heavily perspiring in a business suit, and explained himself. He had stopped, he said, but he had to admit it was beyond the line. But there was a reason. He had pictures of the street corner. He had an easel upon which he set elaborate drawings showing there were bushes blocking the view from the stop sign and that you had to move up eleven feet six inches past the stop sign — he had mathematical formulas and angles of view drawn war on drugs. I can only figure out that they are against all laws that don't apply to commerce. I have no idea what they endorse beyond that. But I really liked their candidate Harry Brown. He made a lot of very astute points. He is in favor of immediately abolishing our legal terrorist orgnization, the IRS. I gave him high points for that. They also want to abolish all gun control. I have mixed feelings about that. I think it is important to have the right to keep and bear arms. I understand the argument that guns aren't necessary in a civilized nation. My response to that is Germany 1938. A highly civilized country that has given the world great artists, scientists and thinkers on all frontiers. Since all guns were registered, when Hitler took over, he simply collected all the guns and effectively disarmed the citizenry. I wonder what would have happened if the German people could have fought back? If you say, it can't happen here, I say, why not? It happened there... On the other hand, I don't want my neighbor to have a Howitzer.

Too bad we couldn't take the best from each candidate and make a conglomerate.

I wonder who the players will be next time. I just know Hilary will run for President eventually. Arnorld Schwarzenegger will go for Govenor of California soon. He'd run for President except for that annoying 'native son' phase in the Constitution. But for now we have Georgie. CNN won't be on in my house for the next four years until the Bush/Dick administration pulls out. •

"The Winter Antiques Show"

The opening night gala of the 47th Annual Winter Antiques Show designed by Bill Tansey was held at the Seventh Regiment Armory on Park Avenue. Celebrities & Socialites gathered and gazed while opening their pockets wide for the 110 year old social service organization, The East Side House Settlement. One of the first antiques sold was a small table described as having curves like Marilyn Monroe by Dover Leslie & Leigh Keno. It sold for over $300,000. Congratulations!

CLASSIC CARS WITH BOB GELBER

The following is a personal list of some of my favorite vehicles of the Hamptons. Please bear with me, and remember that it's all in the eyes of the beholder.

Everyone's going to think I'm crazy on this call, but I think the Hampton Jitney bus is a work of art. First of all, the bus chassis itself is made by the Prevost Bus Company of Canada,and in the world of busses, they are considered to be one of the world's best manufacturers. They are beautifully made of the finest materials, and are built to run for at least one million miles. I do believe the engine and drive train, (which is American made by Detroit Diesel) is warranteed to five hundred thousand miles. They are mechanically elegant and are virtually the largest vehicles on the road, capable of cruising at very high speeds (on most roads but the Long Island Expressway.)

Most people know, the beautiful flowing green on gray graphics proudly festooned on the flanks of all the Hampton Jitneys were designed by one of the greatest pop artists, the late Roy Lichtenstein of Southampton.

It's a great lookin' whale of a bus, artistically presented, that beautifies the highways of the Hamptons.

Then we have all the Porsches out here. I've been to Germany and to the Porschè factory where these little egg cars have been made since the beginning of time. Let me tell you one thing...they're gorgeous, and there are more of them here on a summer's weekend then in all of Germany! Anybody who loves cars has got to love Porsches. It's the dedication of the company to mechanical perfection that turns me on. Sure I'm getting a little tired of looking at the same basic shape for the last thirty-four years, but boy did those German car nuts get it right. I'll take my Porsche in basic black please...a funny choice for a summer Hampton's ride. But that's the most popular color out here, and when it comes to car colors, the folks out here know.

Range Rover 4.0 HSE

What can I say about Ferrari that has not already been said? Every single one of them ever made has been beautiful. Even the, so-called unpopular, four-seaters have shapes that will put every other four-passenger car in the world to shame. When it comes to industrial design, especially in motorcars, the Italians are world leaders. When it comes to design trend setting, it is not Porsche. Mercedes may build a mechanically stronger vehicle than all the Brits put together, but on the scale of elegant, it doesn't come close. Why even the ex-trucker who went to finishing school and turned into a Range Rover has to be one of the most elegant all around mud-stomping machines ever devised by man. In fact, the Range Rover has so much class, it is the only vehicle in the world, perhaps second to a race car that has just completed the 24 hours of LeMans) that actually looks sexy when it is covered in road grime!

Now, in the off-season, one can't help but notice the armies of pick-up trucks, vans and large vehicles, like cement trucks, that seem to clog our roads (Road?). I don't know about you, but every time I try to get somewhere it seems I get stuck behind some horizon-obscuring vehicle that can't go faster than 30 miles per hour. Add to this formula Montauk highway, the one lane autoroute to frustration, and I sometimes wonder if it makes any sense at all to drive a Ferrari, Porsche or overpowered Mercedes or BMW out here.

It just dawned on me, that's probably why there was a racetrack in Bridgehampton. So East End motorists could vent their frustration of driving at such slow speeds in heavy traffic. I say bring back the Bridgehampton racetrack. Symbolically, we need to know that there is somewhere out here you can drive your favorite cars at more than 30 miles per hour.

If traffic gets much worse, perhaps in the future it would make more sense to sell off all our cars and buy Vespa motorscooters. They would make less of a traffic jam because of their miniscule size, with the added bonus of being able to talk to each other en route. Who needs cell phone?

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

Besides public museums like the Tate Modern and the Hayward, private galleries also offered innovative and interactive experiences. Experimentation ran amok at London's White Cube, an "in" gallery located on a previously derelict East End street near Hoxton Square. Inside the gallery, one spacious space held Antony Gormley's cast iron installation— two male nude sculptures attached to each corner of the room. The effect on this critic was one of both sparseness (the setting) and detail (the sculptures).

The Saatchi Gallery, housed in a garage-like building, seemed out of place in the slightly upscale neighborhood, yet it maximized its large high-ceilinged room like White Cube for a group exhibit, "Ant Noises 2." (The Saatchi, as many recall, caused a sensation with its "Sensation" show at The Brooklyn Museum.) Favorites included Tracy Emin's appliqued blanket and her installation featuring an unmade bed. Damien Hirst's giant ashtray with butts was there, too, a smaller version of which was recently at New York's Gagosian Gallery. Sarah Lucas was represented as well as were the controversial Chapman Brothers with their outrageous surreal sculpture resembling a runaway from a David Cronenberg horror film.

Visits to artists' studios completed this critic's varied aesthetic experience. Torie Begg's installations in a large industrial space were just as innovative as any show at various "cutting edge" galleries: a yellow shoe series; an arrangement of paint buckets with splatters on the floor (Jackson Pollock clones?). Ms. Begg, who is most concerned with the painting process and viewers' response, successfully involved the spectators in such a process.

Garden Court Hotel

Henry Moore's studio and museum illicited a similar involvement but one that was aimed at the beauty of formal, rather than Ms. Begg's conceptual, aspects. Moore's country home (near the residence where Barbara Hepworth and Ben Nicholson lived during part of World War II) adds to this formal appreciation as spectators wander around the grounds replete with Moore's magnificant works. Smaller in scale, of course, are his various workplaces, cottages which are also scattered around the property.

Moore's sculptures, resulting from diverse influences like Cubism, Aztec culture and Jung, primarily owe much to indigenous nature forms, apparent in his studio environment. What was most fascinating to this critic was the myriad of Moore's sizes: very small flint stone pieces and shells connected by string in his studios juxtaposed with his large outdoor sculptures, a few of which were placed on hills away from his studios.

Returning to the London hotel where this critic stayed, Garden Court evoked another perspective proving that not all aesthetic experiences must be contemporary or "cutting edge." The Garden Court, originally two 1870's townhouses, had an old-fashioned, yet warm and comfortable ambience. Located in a Victorian garden square, the drawing room was appropriately fitted out with a velvet love seat and Art Nouveau flourishes. It was the perfect place to contemplate the here-and-now— and times gone by as well.

HONORING THE ARTIST: RAMIRO

Speaking with Grenning Gallery's Laura Grenning is almost like talking with last week's cover artist, Ramiro, himself. We wished we could have had a face-to-face conversation with him, but that's not likely considering that Ramiro lives in Florence, Italy. Except when he comes each summer to spend time with Ms. Grenning and her husband in Shelter Island.

"He loves to swim and sail," Ms. Grenning explains. "But I almost killed him when I insisted he swim with me (I'm an avid swimmer) from Shell Beach to Wades Beach one time. He almost didn't make it." She smiles at the memory.

Last Week's Cover By Ramiro

It's apparent that there's a real fondness between Ramiro and Ms. Grenning, a professional and personal attachment that began when Ms. Grenning first took classes from the young artist at the Florence Academy of Art. "He came from a poor family in Italy," Ms. Grenning continues. "He was selected by a Jesuit priest to attend school where he was educated in classical music and literature. It took him a long time to earn money to come to Florence, but he made it. He sold leather and lived in an attic."

Ramiro's art reflects this early training: his style is classical realism, where movement and rhythm play a part. According to Ms. Grenning, there are three distinct aspects to his art: body, mind and soul. Ms. Grenning explains: "The body is his technique, the mind his concepts and the soul his vision."

"Self Portrait" by Ramiro

Despite Ramiro's classically-oriented art, there's a contemporary feel to many of the paintings. One features a man playing a guitar in the background; a woman sits on a tilted chair in the foreground. A bowl of goldfish is located on the floor. The work's narrative nature accounts for its modern flavor as we wonder about the importance of the goldfish and why the female is sitting on a chair that's about to tumble over.

Ramiro's cover painting is a combination of the classic and contemporary. The woman's demeanor is both strong and dainty, her eyes downcast. There's a hint of narrative here, too, the presence of a story that has been played out.

There's no need to catagorize Ramiro's work, however. Ms. Grenning believes in the talent and commitment of her artist when she says, "Ramiro loves sharing his knowledge as a teacher and as an artist."

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

OSCAR . . . WHO?

In the early, hurly-burly, girlie days of Hollywood, some of its white, silken gown glamour was smirched by a few crude, oily, grasping producers. At the funeral of one of the most despised, it was noted that everyone in the glittery town was there. "See", a columnist said, "if you give the public what they want, they'll come out for it." Recently, Box Office numbers have reflected this truism, when suddenly a flood of high-interest movies were released from the Oscar race gates. Some may be hated but, most are entertainingly watchable and a few very moving and surprisingly fulfilling . . . as opposed to simply getting your fill. In this category I submit THIRTEEN DAYS and FINDING FORRESTER. I cite these films because (if you'll allow me some indulgence) they have the ability to inspire and elevate the human spirit. With a cornucopia of humanity, they make given assumptions . . . those old truisms. . .fresh fields for discovery.

THE WRITE STUFF

FINDING FORRESTER retraces fairly worn plot paths. Its director, Gus Van Sant, revisits the classrooms of his Good Will Hunting and, a few other good similar familiars. .. I assume to get it right this time and, he does. Again, an unsure young man with genius capabilities is mentored by an older man who has isolated himself. Through mutual, trusting interrelation they both find their way. The student is brilliant and black. He is reluctant to alienate his friends in the hood so, readily displays his basketball skills but, conceals his amazing intelligence and writing abilities. The boy is, Jamal Wallace, and is portrayed with great, cool sincerity by Rob Brown, a 16 year old, novice actor. As photographed in close-up, his fresh-as-Grecian youth sculptures-face helps produce a beautiful and compellingly real, make-believe kid of heroic proportions. He is the perfect foil for Sean Connery's, powerfully enacted, William Forrester, a revered, one-novel writer who has interred himself in a Bronx tenement for forty years but, will teach Jamal to write.

Mr. Connery's highly theatrical performance never over-rides believability, even when the plot defies it. His Forrester, encrusted with pessimistic wariness and audacious, fearful boredom is never fully explained but, neither will J.D. Salinger. Jamal and Forrester begrudgingly teach each other . . . lead each other through the maze of barricades, pitfalls and disappointments that life presents or, that we create for ourselves.

The two protagonists, role-reversing as student and teacher, tenderly light up the wonder of knowledge as they ignite, for the audience, the thrill of compassionate learning. That's enough for me. Byways in the film such as the huge obstacle of a villainous prof. (F. Murray Abraham) at the exclusive school and the tinge of an interracial romance (Anna Paquin) are secondary but, stagily assist a film that is, of a piece by itself, vividly dramatic and, if I can say so . . . . a lesson.

13 COULD HAVE BEEN REALLY UNLUCKY

THIRTEEN DAYS is also a "lesson" film. It recounts the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1962. . . the countdown of days to a possible Atomic Bomb war. This movie is also packaged wonderfully and dramatically driven but, now edged in black with morbid suspense, in spite of the fact that we know the ending . . . because it doesn't require a massive stretch of our usually fiction-prone imaginations to contemplate a possible recurrence. John F. Kennedy was President, his brother, Robert, Attorney General and Kenneth P. O'Donnell, JFK's aide and confidant.

Pretty much a fenced-in White House discourse (a lot of white guys in white shirts and dark ties and suits, talking to older guys in over-decorated uniforms) it is none-the-less impressively strong. I noted three young boys in the audience totally taken with the film. The large cast of public figures do much better than resemble the originals. Most especially, as the centerpiece, Bruce Greenwood, as the President, makes the film, for he makes JFK responsibly real. Legend is bound to blanket a project of this kind and, there it is. Look, instead to the spirit. . . the human doubting, the thought, intellect and the notion of leadership. It's a challenge . . . or, you can retreat to Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory.

MAYOR KOCH Goes To THE MOVIES

This is a Taiwanese film that has received many awards and is still packing people into theaters. I went to an 8:00 p.m. performance on a Friday night and it was sold out. As I waited to enter the theater, I saw the audience leave from the previous show, which had also been sold out.

This film is almost three hours long and I expected an evening of joy watching a superb movie. Instead, I found this film to be a bore and it occasionally put me to sleep, if only for a few seconds. I pinched myself to stay awake, regardless of how painful the film is to watch.

Because so many critics and people loved this film and I did not, it left me in a quandary. Am I insufficiently sensitive to detect this film's apparent quality as a work of art? Or could it be that this is simply not a very good film? I have concluded that it is the latter.

Yi Yi (-)

The plot involves a number of families who live in modern day Taiwan. They live a life style similar to that maintained by the middle class here in the United States.

The characters range from a grandmother, who never utters a word but comforts a granddaughter suffering from emotional anguish, to a small boy who the critics found precious and whose lines I found unbelievable and often silly. My four year old grandnephew Noah could run circles around him in intelligence, wit, and I think even acting ability. Anyway, I could hardly wait until the movie was over.

When I entered the movie, a middle aged man came over to me and said: "I do not know what to think about this film, and I'll be interested to read your review." My parting words to him now are that you do not have to feel torn or ashamed for not having liked this film. It was just a terrible movie.

In order to get to my car after leaving the theater, I had to climb over some snow that was left on the street, and I slipped and fell. I thought to myself, please God, no broken hip. I relaxed during the fall and did not suffer any injury.

The very next day, I read that President Regan had fallen and broken his hip on the same day. Of course, he is 90 and I am only 76. But most important, I go to the gym every day and I believe that really makes the difference and strengthens your bones.

So movie goers, I leave you with two pieces of advice. Do not go to see Yi Yi and go to the gym.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

It seems that in summer, guacamole, the ageless avocado dip, makes the entertaining scene more than any other appetizer. But did you know that the Hass avocado is in season from November through February? This luscious, nutrient rich fruit from Mexico is in plentiful supply right now. And market prices reflect its abundance.

Early in November, along with a number of food writers, I had the pleasure of an extraordinary lunch at restaurant Maya, at 1191 First Avenue in New York City. The artistically creative executive chef/ restaurateur, Richard Sandoval, a native of Mexico, presented an avocado-based menu.

Freshly prepared guacamole with quesadillas awaited the incoming guests. The pleasant dining room embraced the warm earthy tones of Mexico and was the perfect backdrop for the handsome table service and prehistoric Mayan masks lining the restaurant walls. Chef Sandoval's flavorful food included avocado de aquacote, a luscious avocado gazpacho with an unforgettable creamy texture and ensalada de berros, naranjas y aquacote, a delicious watercress, orange and avocado salad. Pechuga Mexicana simply means chicken, Mexican-style, but this pechuga was far from ordinary. Slices of moist chicken breast artistically arranged on a mound of crisp fideos were surrounded by a tasty and colorful tomatillo-avocado salsa. Avocados didn't work their way into dessert but dessert did arrive in the way of crepes with caramelized bananas and ginger ice cream.

Avocados contain mono-and poly-unsaturated "good" fats and are recommended for dieters and diabetics who are limiting their carbohydrate intake. Under the dark pebbly skin the pale green flesh is creamy smooth and full of flavor when perfectly ripe. To test ripeness, press the bottom gently with your thumb; if it feels soft it is ready for eating. Alternatively, ripen avocados for a few days on a kitchen counter.

Super Bowl Sunday is on the horizon, a day when more guacamole is served than at any other time of the year. Celebrate with Hass avocados from Mexico.

GUACAMOLE MAYA

Yield: about 3 cups

2 fully ripened Hass avocados
1 cup peeled, seeded and diced tomatoes
1/4 cup chopped onion
1 1/2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
3/4 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon freshly ground black pepper

1. Cut the avocados in half, lengthwise. Grasp with both hands and twist to separate the halves. To easily remove the pit, stab it with a sharp knife and give the pit a twist. Using a large oval spoon scrape against the skin to loosen the flesh; scoop out each avocado half.

2. Dice avocado halves and place them in a mixing bowl. Add remaining ingredients and toss gently to mix. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Serve with tortilla chips.

GAZPACHO DE AGUACOTE

Serve this creamy smooth avocado gazpacho at room temperature.
Yield: Serves 4

3 fully ripe Hass avocados, halved, pitted, and diced
2 cups peeled, seeded and diced cucumbers
3/4 cup chopped fresh tomato
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 can (14-1/2 oz.) low-sodium chicken broth
1 - 2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
1 1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon freshly ground pepper
1 1/2 cups tortilla chips, coarsely broken
Cilantro sprigs for garnish, optional

1. Remove 1/2 cup diced avocado and set aside for garnish.

2. In a blender, place half the remaining avocado, cucumber, tomato, onion, broth, lemon juice, salt and pepper. Process until mixture is smooth and transfer to a bowl with a rubber spatula. Repeat with remaining ingredients.

3. Toss together reserved, diced avocado and broken tortilla chips. To serve: ladle gazpacho into four soup bowls. Spoon a small mound of the chip mixture in each soup bowl, garnish with cilantro sprig, if desired and serve.

PECHUGA MEXICANA

Chicken Breast with Tomatillo Salsa and Fideos
Serves 4

1 pound tomatillos, peeled
1 medium onion, quartered
2 jalapeno peppers, seeded
8 ounces fideos (dried angel hair pasta)
1/4 cup vegetable oil
3 cups chopped tomatoes
1/2 cup chopped onion
3/4 cup chicken broth, divided
Salt and freshly ground pepper
2 tablespoons chopped fresh cilantro
3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
4 boneless, skinless chicken breast halves
1/2 fully ripened Hass avocado, pitted, peeled and diced
Crème fraiche garnish, optional

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

1. Prepare salsa: Place tomatillos, onion quarters and jalapenos, in a small roasting pan.

2. Meanwhile break fideos in large pieces. Heat a large ovenproof skillet, over medium-high heat and put in vegetable oil. Add fideos and saute until golden, about 1 minute. Drain off oil. Add tomatoes, chopped onion, 1/4 cup chicken broth, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper and toss everything to mix. Cover skillet tightly and bake until pasta is tender, about 12 -15 minutes.

3. Remove roasted vegetables to a chopping board and chop coarsely. Place in a saucepan and stir in remaining 1/2 cup chicken broth, cilantro, 1 tablespoon olive oil, 1 teaspoon salt and 1/8 teaspoon pepper. Keep warm

4. Trim chicken breasts of all excess fat, rinse and pat dry with paper towels. Season chicken breasts with salt and pepper. In a large skillet, over medium-high heat, heat remaining 2 tablespoons olive oil. Put the chicken in the hot fat and saute, turning them until golden brown and cooked through about 7-8 minutes. Chicken should be springy to the touch. Transfer breasts to a cutting board and cut each into 1/2-inch slices.

5. To serve: Divide fideos and mound equally on 4 dinner plates. Fan chicken slices on and around fideos. Spoon warm tomatillo salsa around chicken and scatter diced avocado over the salsa. Garnish with crème fraiche, if desired and serve.

Super Bowl Party Tips

This Sunday is the big day every sports fan has been waiting for. The biggest single day sporting event of the year, Super Bowl 35, Sunday, January 28, is being played in Tampa, Florida this year and families and friends will get together to watch, celebrate and enjoy this big event.

Some of the highlights for this weeks event are: The Backstreet Boys will perform the National Anthem and Ray Charles will sing America the Beautiful at the Super Bowl marking the first time that two songs will be performed prior to the start of the game. The NFL and CBS have announced that MTV will be producing the halftime show for this season's Super Bowl and from Lombardi's Packers to Warner's MVP performance in Super Bowl 34, re-live all the great moments in Super Bowl history. Dan Kaler will get his chance at a cool $1 million if he can hit a field goal under Super Bowl pressure.

If you are hosting a Super Bowl party in your home, there are several party ideas that will make you the hostess with the mostess. The Fiesta Super Bowl Party Idea: Put a little spice into your Super Bowl party. You will definitely be a hit by adding Latin food, games and music. A fiesty party is a nice change for an office, neighborhood, or just-for-friends gathering. Hungry armchair quarterbacks wil love any of these noshing notables; make a fantastic eight layer bean and salsa dip, little tacos and small burritos. Have black bean chili and tortillas-it's a great crowd-pleaser since it's simple, filling and delicious. Make sure to have plenty of Corona, Tecate or Sol beer and wear a sweat shirt or T-shirt with the home-team logo. I'm sure you can think of lots of themes for your big Super Bowl Party. Sit back, relax and enjoy the game.

Home Improvements

A Room With A (Great) View : A Renovation Story

A few years ago, friends of ours purchased a condominium after living in their own house for many years. Built in the mid-80s, the unit had not been updated since that time. In fact, it had been minimally maintained as it had been used as an income-producing rental property for an absentee owner who lived in Los Angeles. What follows is the story of what they learned, what they loved and what they regretted.

The Decision...We'll Take It!

"As real estate agents around the world will tell you, the most important thing about a house or a piece of property is LOCATION, LOCATION, LOCATION. But just like a pretty face, a panoramic water view can seduce even the most jaded of us into dismissing more practical concerns. We fell in love with the view and the skylights and the terrace. We were hooked, even though the seller was a little inflexible over price. We figured, well, just a few improvements are all we need. We had forgotten, after renovating our Southampton house years before, that when you're dealing with renovating projects, one thing leads to another...and another...and, well, you get the picture. But the view really was superb.

The Entry Hall led right into...The Master Bedroom?

"Although the view was swell, we at least did notice this. The contractor did to. Our solution was, block off the doorway with a wall, and turn a hallway closet into the entry into the master bedroom. This could be accomplished rather easily, but we were concerned with the newly private entry being dark. So we came up with an original idea: instead of creating a solid wall, we had the contractor install a "window," about 2 foot by 4 foot, of glass bricks. We used the ones that are "wavy" (so that you can't see through them), and the result was that light filtered through but someone standing in the foyer still could not see into the master bedroom. This was definitely one of the very best improvements that we made.

Former master bedroom doorway

The Eighties Look: Disco-like Mirrors and Box-Like Rooms

"The mirrors had to go. An entire wall in the dining room and the wall above the fireplace were completely mirrored. All that was missing was the little ball hanging in the middle of it all! The wall in the dining room, after the mirrors had been removed, was then sheet rocked and painted. A big improvement! The mirror over the fireplace was removed (the contractor had a hard time removing these as they were glued to the sheet rock behind them) and a tall mantel, in a very traditional style, was added. Under the mantel, the marble around the fireplace itself was pale beige and institutional in feel. We replaced the beige with dark green marble and also the glass doors, which were surrounded by battered brass, with doors with no moldings and with flat black trim. The result is elegant and traditional. We learned that money is well spent improving a mantle and fireplace. It really transformed the room.

The Andersen Doors

Charmed by the open views of Long Island Sound, we neglected to notice that the Andersen window sliding doors were missing their screens and were in need of interior repair due the high wind conditions. We remembered hearing some-

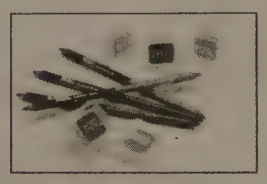
I personally love the smudgy off the press, thanks to New York City, New York Color Eye Cubes and Eyeliner Duets, you can layer your lids luxuriously lovely at an affordable price. New York Color's got all the shades you've been searching for – sparkling pastels, smoky smudges, soft neutrals, and more, at far, far less than the cost of most cosmetics.



Try Eye Cubes and your eyes will speak volumes...they are single pan eyeshadows in a spectrum of shades to reflect your every mood. They're perfect for mixing and matching, highlighting and contouring, and adding extravagant eye accents.

And, with Eyeliner Duets two-in-one eyeliner pencils, you can be the first in line to grab hold of the latest eye trends easily. Choose from such cutting-edge cosmetic combos as Mockingbird, (opalescent white/black) or Rich Girl (gold, pearl/black). Think all-in-one simple sophistication, got-it glamour, and instant eye appeal.

A Songbird For Your Ear

McGuire's Hearing Aid Service has announced that it now offers Songbird, the world's first disposable hearing aid, to help patients combat the effects of mild-to-moderate hearing loss.

This innovative hearing device is specifically designed to treat people, particularly baby boomers, who have hearing loss resulting from life-long exposure to decibel-blasting music and other forms of noise pollution.

"Long-term exposure to noise pollution is the most common cause of hearing loss in adults age 45 to 64; however, this market has been very reluctant to try any form of hearing correction," says David Carr, VP, McGuire's all brand Hearing Aid Service. He believes the new Songbird Disposable Hearing Aid will encourage a lot of people to try hearing correction. Songbird not only offers a sound quality that rivals the best hearing aids in the industry, but it is convenient, virtually invisible in the ear, extremely comfortable, and very affordable.

Mr. Carr explained that each Songbird Disposable Hearing Aid will cost $39 (professional fees not included) and delivers a full forty days of life when used twelve hours per day.

Because the device is discarded when the battery runs out, consumers no longer have to be concerned about battery replacements or repairs. The elimination of a battery door provides room for a microphone that is seven times larger than typical hearing aid microphones, creating high-fidelity sound in a hearing aid sized to fit discreetly in the ear.

Unlike ordinary hearing aids, Songbird can be fit in just one visit to a hearing professional and is available in a variety of pre-set acoustical formats to fit the specific needs of each wearer. Songbird also features automatic volume control, allowing people to avoid the need to make frequent volume adjustments.

Prior to the new Songbird Disposable Hearing Aid, many people who could benefit from wearing a hearing aid were reluctant to get one due to the high cost and the hassle of frequent maintenance.

For more information about the Songbird Disposable Hearing Aid, or to schedule an appointment, please call 631-369-2808.

POLICE BLOTTER

Petit larceny, indeed. An East Hampton resident parked his car in the senior citizens parking lot at the Citizen Center on Springs Road. When he returned to it he reported to the police that someone had "moved tools around" inside the car, but, apparently, none of the tools were stolen. However, coins had been taken from the glove compartment and the ashtray, specifically, two 1950 quarters worth $4 apiece.

An Amagansett resident told police that not only had hunters been shooting at his house, but that one morning a hole had been shot through the bedroom window. The moral is don't wear anything in the bedroom that makes you look like a deer.

A Riverhead resident will be going to court with a panoply of charges after using a stolen credit card to rent not one but a number of rooms at the Budget Host Inn and purchase items at the 7-Eleven on Route 58 – in addition to stealing a car from a gas station.

A fight occurred at the Green Derby in Southampton during which the manager of the bar and an employee were assaulted. Five men were arrested not long after the brawl. After allegedly hitting the manager in the head, Ronald Eleazer, Jr. of Southampton left the Green Derby in a car with other unruly patrons. The police were summoned and stopped the car. Inside they found not only the rowdy culprits but crack cocaine. Another of the alleged instigators of the fight, Terrence T. Smith of Greenport, who had fled separately in a car, was also stopped by police and found in possession of crack, as well as marijuana.

A taxi driver in Riverhead reported to police that a woman had taken his receipt book from the front of his cab and and fled without paying the fare. The receipt book had $50 in it, as well as coupons for free taxi rides.

New York State Police Officer Kevin Ring noticed something wrong in Riverside ... that is, he spotted a pair of legs sticking out of a car slowly moving along Old Quogue Road on a Saturday night. The officer followed the car; as he neared it the pair of legs grew a torso and arms and a man leapt from the car and fled. But Paul Jackson was soon arrested and charged with trying to rob the driver of the vehicle and also steal the car itself.

Dan's LETTERS

THIS COMPUTER KNOWS WHAT I AM DOING

Dear Dan,

First of all I must tell you that I have been reading your paper for over twenty-five years. I was first introduced to it by my boss at the bank then known as Tinker National. I was the secretary to Mr. Charles E. Falkner.

I do not live anywhere near the Hamptons. I have lived in Port Jefferson Station for the past forty-one years. We frequented the many beaches out there when possible.

Today I sat down after my chores and had a cup of coffee and proceeded to read the paper. The first one was about increasing the Hamptons. I then went on and saw the title General Printing and got very interested. I have never wanted to use a computer. Even at work in the bank I somehow got out of having one on my desk and that was fine with me. Well, with grandchildren and great grandchildren now, you have to have a computer. I was given a computer this past Christmas and all I had to do was buy a printer. Well, what did I buy at a sale? I won't mention the store, a $59 Lex Mark Z12. I know yours is an eleven, but mine has the same person giving orders over the speakers.

When I first started to use it and as I said before it was new to me, but I type very well, I enjoyed using it...until it started to talk to me. There was one time when my husband actually called down to the basement where I have my office and asked me who was with me. My granddaughter, Danielle Muller, would ask me if I went online or tried Ebay or something else and I would tell her that this computer knows what I am doing.

It would say the ink is low in such a tone and when I would keep on typing and not respond to the instructions it actually sounded as though the person saw me and he would repeat again: time to replace the ink cartridge. Then if I did not press the correct keys when getting my Letters printed, it would say "Printer not responding" in such a command to me. My granddaughter thought I was being ridiculous, she even said to her husband, she thinks the computer is talking to her personally. I know just how you feel, but you know I think it is fun.

Thanks for your articles. I really enjoy them and talk about them to other people. Keep up the good work. I even mail one of your papers to my daughter who lives 400 miles away in upstate New York.

Mrs. G. Kramer
Port Jefferson, NY

in magic marker — and as he explained himself, talking in a heavy German accent and making short chopping motions with his hands, he repeatedly referred to the Justice as "Your Highness," even after being continually corrected and told the correct salutation was "Your Honor."

"Guilty," the Justice said. "Fifty dollar fine. Next case."

The next case was an attractive young woman who also had been ticketed for falling to stop at a stop sign.

"My nine year old son Timmy forgot to take his goldfish to school," she said. "It was important to him, and the teacher had asked him to bring it. It's a pretty little goldfish and Timmy had named it Whiskers. So I picked up Whiskers in his little fish bowl and I took him out to the car and put him on the front seat next to me so I could keep an eye on him. Timmy takes the bus to school. We're new in town. I really didn't know the exact way. I was coming down this steep hill and I just didn't see the stop sign there at the bottom until the very last minute, and I just knew I would have to choose. If I didn't stop Whiskers would be okay, but if I DID stop, this fishbowl would just flip right off the seat and, well..."

"Case dismissed in the interests of justice," the Judge said.

Renovation Story

where that they were supposed to be guaranteed for 20 years and so we just assumed that, at the very least, the interior repairs, which included doors that were very difficult to open and close, would be covered by that warranty. Wrong. There is a 20-year warranty on Andersen windows and doors, but it only covers the fogging up of the glass between the two panes. But the screens weren't that expensive and, as it turned out, the doors did loosen up a little with some the addition of some WD40. No big problem here.

Surprise, Surprise

All of the appliances appeared to be original, in other words, about 15 years old. We decided to replace all of them (with the exception of the dishwasher) with top of the line Maytag appliances. We just loved the new, front-loading washer and dryer. After ordering them, we went back and told the contractor who immediately asked, "How big are they?" Aren't washers and dryers a standard size? "No." As it turned out, the cubbyhole where the old washer and dryer had been ("elegantly" enclosed by a flower-printed shower curtain) was now too small to hold the new appliances. So we had to expand the cubby into a neighboring closet (this was a surprise expense) but the end result, with the new appliances now hiding behind custom-ordered louver doors with brass knobs, was worth it.

Another Surprise...

Having never lived in anything but a house for so many years, we were used to exterior noise (and had considered our prior house's location in regard to this matter) but were completely unprepared for the possibility of interior sound. After installing beautiful wool carpet wall-to-wall (an association requirement – the wall-to-wall, not the wool) and having spent one night sleeping in our new home, we realized that we could hear our neighbors below us. I mean, we could really hear them. We were stunned and dismayed that there hadn't been adequate insulation installed in the floors to muffle at least some sound. This is such a shock if you are used to living in a private house that it is our strong suggestion, if you are considering buying a condominium and there will be neighbors below you (side neighbors are really not a problem because builders usually install fireproof walls here according to code), that you spend a night there before having your expensive wool carpet installed. The result? The carpet had to be lifted up and all of the furniture moved out of the master bedroom. Then the insulation company had to come and blow in extra insulation for another surprise expense of $500. The carpet then had to be re-installed (the same day, unless you plan to spend the night in your guestroom). This was frustrating, expensive and absolutely worth the effort. Save yourself time and money here by heeding our advice!
